M: Good afternoon, students of Robinson High School. This is Mr. Anderson, coach of the school dance club. I'd like to announce that we'll be recruiting additional new members for our school dance club. Previously we were looking for 10 new club members, and many students showed interest in joining. Luckily, we've been assigned to a bigger room than expected. Now we're allowed to accept five additional new members to make a total of 15 students. Once again, I'm happy to inform you that our school dance club has increased the number of new members to recruit. Thank you for your interest.

M: Yes. The boxes are all different sizes, and I'll put each one inside the other.

W: Well, don't you feel bad about wasting all of those boxes?

M: What do you mean? I just wanted the gift to look fancy and interesting.

W: I understand. However, the boxes will end up being thrown away, right?

M: So, you mean it's overpackaging? Oh, I didn't know I was wasting boxes.

W: Yeah. I think we should avoid overpackaging to reduce unnecessary waste.

M: You're right. I'll use one box for now and save the others for later.

W: Good idea. No matter how it looks, Grandma will love your gift.

M: It really catches the theme of the movie. Why do you think people love your stories?

W: When writing film scripts, I always try to make the characters as realistic as possible.

M: Maybe that's why people feel stronger connections to them. What inspires you when you write your scripts?

W: Often, my own life experiences help create many of the scenes in my scripts.

W: Hello, students. Last time, you learned about the people who invented drones. As technology develops, drones are being used more frequently around the world. So, today, we'll talk about how they're used in different jobs. First, drones help farmers grow crops more efficiently. For example, drones are used to spread seeds that may be difficult to plant. They also spray chemicals to protect plants from harmful insects. Second, photographers use drones to easily access areas that are hard to reach. Specifically, nature and wildlife photographers no longer need to go through dangerous jungles and rainforests. Next, drones are useful for police officers when they control traffic. Drones could provide updates on traffic flow and accidents, and even help identify anyone driving dangerously. Last, drones aid firefighters. Firefighters use drones that drop tanks of special chemicals to prevent the spread of fire. Now, let's watch an incredible video of drones in action.
